

Sue Winter
Retired General Employee
City of Fort Worth

As an active employee with the City of Fort Worth (1981-2001), I served as a representative on the Fort Worth's Retirement Board of Trustees from 1987 to 1995. I was vice-chairperson of the Board and chairperson of the Finance Committee.

As the Cable Communications Manager, I was responsible for cable television channels, supervision of staff to produce programming, and oversight in the building and management of the facility used in the endeavor. I was also one of the founders of what is now called CORE, an organization made up of active and retired general city employees.

Since retirement from the City, I am in my third year of Board service to the local Woman's Club, one as president, work in retail at Neiman Marcus on an "on call" basis, serve as treasurer of the House Corporation Board for a fraternal organization located on the Texas Christian University campus, serve as co-chairperson of a committee at my church, and as a Board Member of a condominium association in New Mexico. I also serve on two committees for the Owner's Association in the area in which I live.

Prior to going to work for the City, I was in the Marketing Department of an insurance company, and, right after graduating from Texas Christian University, taught journalism and speech communications in high school located in Fort Worth, Texas.

Originally from San Antonio, Texas, I now call Granbury, Texas my home.
